Carillon Mission

Carillon Communities creates an inspiring and supportive living and learning environment for first-year students. Carillon promotes an environment where students develop a sense of belonging and trust to support their academic success and innovative thought. In Carillon, students consider their own interests and knowledge, and become active agents in their own education.

Course Description

The central theme of Russian 289I and our Carillon community is the abiding human propensity to ask questions, to use language to pursue inquiry. To be a “critical thinker,” one must develop the habit and discipline of asking questions and challenging assumptions.

Through a comparative approach to the US and Russian experiences, we will explore the role of language and its power in different political and social systems. We will explore such questions as: Why is free speech so fiercely defended in a democracy and such a threat to totalitarianism? What is the relationship between free speech, political power and dissent? Is the pen still mightier than the sword, even in the nuclear age? What has shaped our current attitudes toward freedom of expression? How has the concept of political free speech been extended to include freedom of expression in general, such as in the creative arts? What role do new technologies play in the arena of free speech debates?

We will explore how freedom of speech and expression has been defended or its suppression justified in both the US and Russia. We will practice the art of questioning and constructing counter-arguments throughout the course.

Learning Outcomes

This course is NOT just about mastering a body of knowledge and arriving at “correct” answers. You should certainly come away from this course with increased knowledge of the subject, but you should also have developed a more sophisticated ability to subject any and all ideas to critical inquiry. You should be a deeper thinker with the ability to apply new questioning skills to ideas you encounter in other fields and endeavors, both inside and outside the classroom.

After successfully completing this course you will know more about:

- The Russian and American experiences related to freedom of speech
- Seminal documents that still influence our attitudes toward freedom of speech and expression in a wide range spheres of human activity

Course Communication

The best way to get in touch with me is via email directly from the course site in ELMS. You may also email me directly at cmartin@umd.edu, but all emails submitted on ELMS are forwarded to this email. I usually respond to emails within 24 hours. In the rare case that you do not get a response from me within 48 hours, please resend – sometimes emails do get lost or buried. Please check ELMS regularly, as I will post announcements directly on our course site. (For guidance on writing professional emails, see ter.ps/email 😊).
• The role of the creative arts in political discourse, i.e. art as activism and as dissent

After successfully completing this course you will be able to:

• Engage in civil discourse and debate surrounding controversial issues
• Put into practice the skill of critical inquiry, subjecting diverse views to analysis
• Articulate your ideas more clearly both orally and in written form
• Work as part of a team toward a common goal

Required Resources

You will be automatically enrolled in the course site.
All required print materials will be posted on ELMS.

You need to purchase a physical “clicker.” Visit the Students section of clickers.umd.edu for details. You may not use a phone app.
Activities, Learning Assessments & Grading

Percentage of Final Grade

Weekly Assignments/Participation

You can expect to have reading and very brief reflections due each week before our Tuesday class. These weekly assignments are not assigned a grade per se, rather they are “graded” as Pass (Submitted)/Fail (Not Submitted). These are what you might consider “low stakes” in terms of your grade, but these are “high stakes” for the success of the course overall, hence, they count for 20% of your final grade. If you do not do the readings, you will not be prepared to participate in our class discussions, and that affects the entire class. I expect all students to come to class prepared. For each week of the semester, you will find a folder on ELMS under the Files tab, clearly labeled (Week 1, Week 2, etc.) and that contains all required reading material. The reflection/written response assignment will be posted under the Assignments tab and clearly labeled, as well. Each week, the reflection will be due before our first class of the week (Tuesday at 9:30) and be relevant for our discussions for that week. In rare cases, a reflection assignment will be due before class on Thursday. You should expect to spend between 1-2 hours each week reading and reflecting! As a rule, I will not give credit for a late assignment; however, if there are special circumstances preventing you from completing one of these weekly assignments on time, please see me.

Classroom Debates

- Debate 1
  - 20% (10% team grade/10% individual grade)

- Debate 2
  - 30% (20% team grade/10% individual grade)

Teams will be formed in the first week of the semester to prepare for class debates. Teams will be assigned an issue and then paired for classroom debates. Your work as part of these teams will comprise half of your final grade, and most of your work outside of class will be comprised of working with your team toward our debates. You can expect to spend 3-4 hours per week on your team debate issue, researching, analyzing, discussing, preparing. I will provide weekly guidance to keep your team focused and on track. You will have plenty of opportunity throughout the semester to provide me and your teammates with feedback via self-assessments, team assessments and discussions with me. Debate 1, or actually the first round of debates, will take place in mid-semester during class. The second round of debates will take place during class during the final two weeks of the semester. The number of teams/pairs will determine how many class periods will be devoted to our debates. Each debate (two teams debating a single issue) is expected to take 30 minutes, with 15 minutes for class debrief. If we stick to this schedule, we can debate two issues per class period (90 minutes). Those of us who are watching the debates will provide feedback about the various arguments and points made, effectiveness of debate strategies. I will provide feedback forms to the “audience” and I will take classmates’ comments into consideration in assessing the team performance.

Two Graded Written Reflections

- 20% (10 % each)

I do not expect you to produce an argument that is “right” or “wrong.” Rather you will be given a thought-provoking question related to our discussions and assigned material and asked to articulate your response (which may include your own views, multiple viewpoints, etc.). You cannot “prepare” per se for these graded written reflections. I will give you the question a week before the assigned date for the graded reflection, but you will write the essay during class. You may use any resources you wish while writing the essay. In fact, I would prefer that you bring a laptop to class (or let me know and I will provide one) and submit the essay on ELMS. If you have a “typing challenge” or need special accommodation, please let me now and we will work around it! For these in-class assessments, I will only offer a make-up if arranged ahead of time as a result of an unavoidable conflict or due to a true emergency. A good rule of thumb for this and all your classes is to speak to your professor in advance any time you think you will have a problem completing an assignment or assessment on schedule.
Final Assessment

10%

Written, in-class, during regularly scheduled final

Each assessment will be graded in the following way:

- Exceeds expectations: A
- Meets expectations fully: B
- Meets expectations minimally: C
- Does not meet expectations: D
- No evidence of the expectations: F

I will provide detailed rubrics for what it means to exceed/meet/not meet expectations for each graded assignment. Remember that these grades are yours to be earned! I will assign +/- in grading your work and in the final grade. All grades will be posted on ELMS. I do not grade on a curve and I would be delighted if each student were to earn a final grade of A! I am happy to meet with you at any time to discuss your grades, expectations or a particular assignment. If you have a concern about your performance in the class or a particular grade, please see me immediately; don’t wait until it is too late to make a course correction!

Graded Assessments | # | Category | Weight |
--- | --- | --- | --- |
Weekly assignments and participation: pre-class reading and reflections submitted on ELMS, graded pass/fail | 10 | 20% |
Graded Reflections: 2, in-class announced ahead of time | 2 | 20% |
Debates Teamwork | 2 | |
- Debate 1 (10% individual grade, 10% team grade) | 20% |
- Debate 2 (10% individual grade, 20% team grade) | 30% |
Final Assessment: in-class, during exam week | 1 | 10% |
TOTAL | | | 100% |

FINAL GRADE will be calculated as follows:

95-100% = A
90-94% = A-
85-89% = B+
80-84% = B
75-79% = C+
70-74% = C
65-69% = D+
60-64% = D
59% or below = F

Campus Policies

It is our shared responsibility to know and abide by the University of Maryland’s policies that relate to all courses, which include topics like:

- Academic integrity
- Student and instructor conduct
- Accessibility and accommodations
- Attendance and excused absences
- Grades and appeals
- Copyright and intellectual property

Please visit www.ugst.umd.edu/courserelatedpolicies.html for the Office of Undergraduate Studies’ full list of campus-wide policies and follow up with me if you have questions.

Course-Specific Policies: In addition to campus policies, please pay particular attention to the following:

Accommodation
Students with ADS (Accessibility and Disability Service) accommodations should contact me at the beginning of the semester to discuss any accommodation for this course. I am happy to work with you to make sure you can participate fully in all aspects of the course.

Code of Academic Integrity
The University has approved a Code of Academic Integrity which prohibits students from cheating on exams, plagiarizing papers, submitting the same paper for credit in two courses without authorization, buying papers, submitting fraudulent documents, and forging signatures. Plagiarism policy: all quotations taken from other authors, including from the Internet, must be indicated by quotation marks and referenced. Paraphrasing must be referenced as well. This Code sets standards for academic integrity at Maryland for all undergraduate and graduate students. As a student, you are responsible for upholding these standards for this course. It is very important for you to be aware of the consequences of cheating, fabrication, facilitation, and plagiarism. For more information on the Code of Academic Integrity or the Student Honor Council, please visit http://www.studenthonorcouncil.umd.edu/whatis.html

The following University of Maryland Honor Pledge has been proposed by the Council and approved by the University Senate:
"I pledge on my honor that I have not given or received any unauthorized assistance on this assignment/examination." This pledge should be included at the beginning of your take-home mid-term and research paper, both of which are to be exclusively your work. You may discuss with classmates the weekly assignments, and you are encouraged to study together for the final exam.

Religious observance
Please inform me of any intended absences for religious observance in advance of the Add/Drop period. I will not schedule graded assessments or debates on these days.

In the event of my absence
If there should be an emergency preventing me from attending our class meeting, I will post an announcement to ELMS. Unless otherwise directed, university policies states that students are expected to remain in the classroom for 15 minutes in the unlikely event that the instructor should not arrive on time. After 15 minutes, it may be assumed that class will not be held. This is very, very rare, and in almost 30 years at UM, I don’t think I have ever missed a class without warning students in some way.

Attendance, class preparation and participation: This refers to quality as well as quantity. It means preparing for class by doing the assignments on time (whether written or just reading assignments) and then participating in class discussions. You will not be able to participate in class discussions if you have not done the assignments on time, hence, multiple absences will lower the participation part of your grade. Of course, things come up and life can be complex, so if you do have to miss a class and you know ahead of time, please let me know. If you miss because of something unexpected and are unable to let me know ahead of time, I ask that you please send me an email and let me know all is well.

No computers, phones or tablet devices are permitted during our class meetings. We only have 3 hours together per week to inquire, analyze, discuss and exchange ideas about some very important issues. During that time, I ask that you focus on our discussions. Researchers have found that electronic devices do interfere with learning and active participation. For that reason, the use of such will not be permitted during class meetings (except when required for ADS accommodations). If a computer will be required, such as for our two reflective writing assignments, I will be sure to announce it ahead of time and make arrangements for you to have one available should that be required. If you are expecting an important call (such as from a family member) for some reason, please advise me ahead of time, keep your phone on vibrate, and step out of the room to take the call. Otherwise, please keep cell phones turned off or to silent throughout the class.

For more information about the science behind the policy, watch: http://youtu.be/WwPaw3Fx5Hk

Get Some Help!

You are expected to take personal responsibility for your own learning. This includes acknowledging when your performance does not match your goals and doing something about it. Everyone can benefit from some expert guidance on time management, note taking, and exam preparation. Consider visiting http://ter.ps/learn and schedule an appointment with an academic coach. Sharpen your communication skills (and improve your grade) by visiting http://ter.ps/writing and schedule an appointment with the campus Writing Center. Finally, if you just need someone to talk to, visit http://www.counseling.umd.edu.

Everything is FREE, and everyone needs help sometimes… all you have to do is ask for it.

Names/Pronouns and Self Identifications

The University of Maryland embraces a diverse student body, and expects us all to fostering equitable classroom and community environments. Please feel free to let me and your fellow classmates know how you wish to be addressed at the start of the semester as we get to know each other, including preferred pronoun use. Aspects of your personal identity (gender, race, class, sexuality, religion, and dis/ability, others) are yours, and it is entirely your choice whether and which aspects to disclose (e.g., should you wish to share it if it comes up in classroom conversation about our experiences and perspectives). We should all refrain from presuming or imposing aspects of identity on others.
